

Dividend

Participate in profits

The holders of Stocks are entitled to a dividend whenever a dividend is declared by the company's board of directors. This is an 'earning per share' and allows you to profit from a company's growth.

Superb selection

A vast selection of instruments are available and you have the ability to diversify your portfolio with stocks from all over the world - in a range of companies and sectors.

'Membership' benefits

As a stock holder you have the right to participate in corporate actions. For example, a company has the right to sell new Stocks at a better price to shareholders or even distribute free shares to them.

The clock isn't ticking

Unlike some financial instruments, there is no 'expiration' date with Stocks. Investors can hold on to their portfolio for an unlimited period of time and with some brokers this is a free service.

Less worry...

Investors in common Stock have no further economic requirements to the company. The amount you have invested is your only obligation.

In and out

Large Cap Stocks usually offer deep liquidity. This implies that an investor not only has the ability to open a position easily but also close it easily. 'Large Cap' is an abbreviation of 'Large Market Capitalization' and refers to companies with a market capitalization over over $10 billion.

Make your Stocks work for you

Investors at some banks or brokers are eligible to use a percentage of their investment collateral for margin trading of Forex, Futures and CFDs. It's a good idea to look into the pros and cons of margin trading as the amounts of leverage involved can lead to amplified profits but also amplified losses.
